AERONAUT HAS A NARROW ESCAPE

Frank Crawford of Marion Falls Twenty Feet From His Balloon and Was Injured.

WILL BE AN ASCENSION TODAY

The Balloon Was Found Five Miles Northeast of This City Near Ben Davis Creek.

Frank Crawford of Marion, who had been employed by the fair association for daily ascensions at the fair caused the throng, who were watching his ascension yesterday, to turn their heads in horror on account of an accident with which he met. His large bag had been inflated, after much difficulty had been encountered, on account of the wind, which preceded the rain of yesterday afternoon, and he was in a hurry to get away and land before the threatening storm had gained its climax.

"Everybody let go," was his command, but this was objected to by his assistant, who said today that he felt as if something was going to happen. The assistant's words were useless and the run was made by Crawford, who was holding on to the bar of his trapeze. A hurdle was necessitated at the inner fence of the race track, for the balloon had not risen to a sufficient height to carry the aeronaut above the fence. As soon as he touched the track the balloon began to make its upward flight for the clouds. When the track had been crossed Crawford, hanging to his trapeze, came in contact with the topmost limbs of an eighteen or twenty foot locust tree, which is immediately to the east of the grandstand.

Immediately after there was an outcry from women, a scream from children, and men wondered, for a twisting object was seen falling through the air, coming "biff, biff" against the limbs of the tree as he fell. People were soon at the side of the limp body of the aeronaut, who been thrown from his trapeze by the collision with the tree. He was carried to Floral hall, and for a time it was thought that death was only a matter of a few minutes.

Crawford was brought to the Beer boarding house in North Morgan street on an I. & C. shuttle car soon after the accident. Medical aid was summoned, who, on examination, found that the unfortunate man had sustained a fractured rib, severe bruises on his left hip, muscular soreness, a sprained left wrist and scratches and skinned face. He was resting easy this morning and it is thought that it will be only a matter of a few days until he will be able to be out. It was thought for a time that he had received internal injuries but such is not thought to be the case at the present time.

This is not the first piece of bad luck that Crawford has had, for in his ballooning experience he has had many close calls from death. He will be forced to give up his ascension this afternoon, but he says that his days as a balloonist are not over.

The fair association late today signed a contract with a man whose name could not be learned to make an ascension in the place of Crawford this afternoon if the weather permits.

Crawford's balloon made a beautiful manless ascension regardless of the accident. It passed above the clouds out of sight and on account of the parachute not being out loose it went to the height of thousands of feet, until it came in contact with a current of air cold enough to force it to the earth. It was found five miles northeast of this city, near Ben Davis creek in the best of condition.

UNLUCKY WITH SULKIES

Joe Christman Was in Accident With Two Bikes Yesterday

Joe Christman, who resides on the old Cole place, was playing in the path of a hoodoo yesterday. He was out on the race course at the fair grounds and accidentally ran into the inner fence, mashing his bike up very badly. He then went and borrowed another one of a friend and before he had gone twenty feet on the track he encountered a collision with another bike, which partially demolished the one he was driving. Mr. Christman said that he would have tried it the third time if he could have borrowed another sulky.

RURAL CARRIERS MEET NEXT WEEK

Mail Men Will be Addressed by Prominent Politicians in Logansport at Annual Session.

ARE EXPECTING FIVE HUNDRED

The annual State convention of the Indiana Rural Letter Carriers' association will be held in Logansport, September 4 and 5. Five hundred rural carriers are expected to be present. One branch of the association has planned a picnic at Spencer park Sunday, September 4, to which all patrons and their families of rural routes in Cass and surrounding counties are cordially invited.

Prominent speakers have been invited and will be present to address the carriers and patrons, among whom are Senator Albert J. Beveridge and ex-congressman Frederick K. Landis. Many rural mail men will attend next Monday, Labor Day, when they enjoy a day's vacation.

NOW FOR THE FALL WORK ON THE FARM

Farmers Are Plowing up Ground For Wheat Sowing and Plowing Large Acreage.

GARDNERS ARE BUSY NOW

Rush county farmers are entering into their fall work in good condition having cleaned up all threshing with a few exceptions. The threshing clubs are all through with their wheat and oats threshing, and are settling up. The next crop is the clover seed which will be a fair yield.

Some farmers are through their plowing for fall wheat sowing while others are busy at work. There will probably be quite a great deal of ground broken for wheat this fall because farmers will sow the ground in which they had oats with wheat. But much wheat will be sowed in corn ground, drilling between the rows.

The growers of tomatoes and sweet corn and all gardeners are very busy now gathering their crops.

Elder C. W. Radcliff of Mount Vernon, Ind., is expected to preach at the Morgan Street Primitive Baptist church Friday evening, September 2, at 7:30 o'clock. All are invited.

German architects are making more and more use of glass bricks, in cases where walls instead of windows are essential while light must be provided.

BIG WEDNESDAY WAS YESTERDAY

The Fair Was Well Attended Yesterday and All Were Pleased with Excellencies Presented.

2000 PEOPLE WERE ON GROUND

Racing Was a Feature—Everything Had Been Put in Readiness for the Day.

Yesterday it was Big Wednesday at the Fair, for it brought, in round numbers, 2000 people to the grounds. Everything moved without a bobble, excepting the aeronaut, who was so unfortunate as to make a bad "get away." The races were pronounced by the 800 spectators, who witnessed them from the grandstand, to be exceedingly good. The attractions on the ground were all well pleased with their attendance, and so were those who attended the attractions.

The exhibits this year are far above the average, both in variety and quantity. The township displays in Floral Hall are excellent from many view points, and one or two of them hold a special uniqueness. A profuseness of fancy work is to be found in Floral Hall that would make queens envious.

The draft horses shown in the small ring yesterday were as near the acme of perfection as could be desired. Class 1 was required by the directors to be shown in harness, and that display was made yesterday afternoon. There were about fifty animals entered to compete for the money in Class 1, and such a collection of valuable draft horses has never been seen on the fair grounds in its fifty-four years of existence.

The usual display of hogs, fruits, cattle, culinary articles and poultry can be found at their usual allotted places, and some of the exhibits in each one of the departments mentioned are worth an individual's time and careful attention. The judge on the culinary entries said yesterday afternoon that if one desired to find good cooking and excellent cooks that they should come to Rush county.

The fair carries a cosmopolitan air this year, for there is everything imaginable to be found on the property of the fair association from a President on down to a bantam cock, with the exception of gambling devices and "stuff" to make one feel happy. Yesterday an elderly man was heard to remark that he had attended the fair many times on Wednesday, but that this year everything was in readiness for the day, just as if it were Thursday, which remark is certainly a compliment to all the exhibitors and stand men.

Carl Kinsley Slipped in Mud and Fell.

Carl Kinsley, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Kinsley, who reside in South Pearl street, met with a very painful accident yesterday afternoon, when he slipped and fell, breaking his right limb. After the rain had ceased he went out to wade in the street gutters, and in some unexplainable manner slipped and fell, breaking the limb near the hip.

LAND FAMILY REUNION.

The fourth annual reunion of the Land family will be held at the Rush county fair ground next Sunday. All relatives are expected to be present to spend an enjoyable day.

RETURNS TO HIS NATIVE HEATH

R. B. Conover, Newspaper Editor of Salem, Oregon, Sees Sister For First Time.

IN FORTY-SIX LONG YEARS

Is Now The Guest of Mrs. E. H. M. Berry and Will Remain Several Weeks.

It is with the greatest pleasure that R. B. Conover, who was born and reared in Decatur county, but who has lived in Oregon for the past forty-five years, returns once more to his native heath for an extended visit. He is now the guest of his sister Mrs. E. H. M. Berry at her home at 406 East Ninth street. He has not seen her for forty-six years and the meeting of the brother and sister yesterday, when Mr. Conover arrived, was touching. He will be in this section of the State for about six weeks on an extended visit with relatives.

Mr. Conover is a newspaper man. He resides in Salem, the capital of Oregon, but conducts a weekly paper at Hubbard about twenty miles from the State center. He gained most of his newspaper knowledge before moving to his western home. Mr. Conover was editor of the Greensburg Standard for a number of years and there learned the underlying principals of the game. He is yet one of the old time editors who goes to the case and sets his own editorials.

Mr. Conover left Indiana just forty-six years ago and located in Norfield, Minn. He was there for a time in the newspaper business and later went to St. Paul. While in Norfield he was the first occupant of the building which was later held up and robbed by the famous James brothers when a bank was located there. The cashier was killed almost instantly. From St. Paul Mr. Conover moved to Salem, Oregon, where he has spent the greater part of his life. In his trip to Salem he traveled on the first train which was ever run over the Union Pacific after it was completed.

It is in Salem that the newspaper editor got his start in life. When he first moved there, Salem was nothing more than a struggling little metropolis of twenty-five hundred souls. Since he has lived there it has grown to a live city of twenty thousand inhabitants. He started his paper in Hubbard, Oregon, and has been making a success with it. He is still conducting a weekly and has a large and good paying circulation. Mr. Conover is getting well along in years and expects to retire from the newspaper business. As soon as he completes his visit here, he will return home and sell his plant and expects to have a comfortable income left after the sale.

It is an interesting story that Mr. Conover relates. He tells of the many trying and hard experiences of a country newspaper editor, especially in the great northwest when he settled there years ago and had to

ARE WORKED TO THE LIMIT

Business Men Get Tired of "Take a Chance" Game.

Indiana towns have about had enough of this "take-a-chance" business for one open season and the business men especially would be glad if there would be a let-up of this sort of begging by everybody. Business men can hardly refuse to take chances when asked whatever the cause, if the person is a patron, but they do it unwillingly.

establish his paper. He has made a long and hard struggle and now will enjoy the fruits of his labor of a half-century. Mr. Conover's daughter, Miss Lulu, accompanied him to Indianapolis and from there went to New York City where she will visit for a year.

Mr. Conover says that he has heard much of Dick Wilson, the fast horse trainer and driver who left here the first of this year for permanent residence in Portland, Oregon. He says that the former local reinsman has created a sensation in the northwest and that he is considered one of the best horsemen in that section of the country.

It is a happy household, the Berry home in East Ninth street where Mr. Conover is stopping. His sister Mrs. Berry, floods him with questions concerning his life in the west and they spend the time in a reminiscent vein. Mrs. Berry's deceased husband was treasurer of Rush county in the early days.

SHELBY COUNTY GETS CONVENTION

Democrats of Sixteenth Judicial District Will Meet in Shelbyville Next Wednesday.

A CANDIDATE FOR PROSECUTOR

Not content with attempting to gulp down all of the nominations for offices in the Sixteenth Judicial district, composed of this and Shelby counties, the Democrats of the sister county have succeeded in landing the convention for Shelbyville. It will be held there on Wednesday of next week. The delegates from this county, thirteen in number, will meet in Shelbyville on the morning of convention day at nine o'clock, and will perfect an organization, after which a candidate for prosecutor and judge will be nominated.

There are four candidates in the race for the prosecutor's nomination, two from this county and two from Shelby. It is probable that Dennis O'Neil will carry the local delegation solid, as he was indorsed by the Rush county Democrats in convention here last Saturday. There does not seem to be much chance for Carson, of this city, unless he is chosen after a deadlock. If Cheney can carry the Shelby county delegation solid, he will be nominated as Shelby county has enough delegates to nominate. But in the primary he met with opposition, furnished by the admirers of Brown, the other candidate from Shelby county. Alonzo Blair from Shelby county is the only candidate for judge.

NEXT MONDAY IS LABOR HOLIDAY

Governor Marshall Has Issued Annual Proclamation, Calling Attention to Day.

SEED TIME AND HARVEST HERE

Laboring Men All Over Country Will Participate in Parade and Demonstrations.

Next Monday, September 5th, is Labor Day, and all over the country, especially in the larger cities, the day will be observed by laboring organizations in a fitting manner. In Indianapolis there will be an observance, including a parade in which the various labor organizations will participate.

Governor Marshall has issued the annual Labor Day proclamation, calling upon the people of the State to observe as a day of rest and a day sacred to the workingmen, September 5, commonly known as Labor Day.

The Governor's proclamation follows:

"Seed time and harvest have not wholly failed since that far-off hour when God threw His bow of promise across the weary waste of waters. Then, labor was as it is now—the law of upright life. It was, and is, honorable; and he alone should go skulking along the highways of life who seeks to gather where he hath not sown; not he, however humble his garb and lowly his mien, who has done a man's work in a manly way. Your true artisan is your true gentleman—for he earns what he takes and he takes not by grace and favor, but by right. To such a one the world should say, 'well done,' and bid him rejoice in the product of his handicraft and exalt the work whereunto he has been called. Such glorification of his calling and rejoicing in its success are seemly and proper and a people honors itself when it honors honest toil by setting aside a sacred day for observance in memory of the fact that it is the homely virtues of the toil-stained sons of the State which preserves our civilization. Indiana has thus behaved herself aright.

"Let not her citizens forget that Monday, September 5, 1910, is a public holiday for labor, whereon the man who has striven for God and home and native land should rejoice, and every member of the ground should resolve to be a toiler and all should solemnly vow to join the union of labor and justice for all mankind."

HERE'S AN OLD FRIEND

Says Winter Will be Early and Also Very Severe.

"Look out for an early winter and a good stiff one, too," said a man who spends much time in trapping. He says the animals are already getting their winter fur on and that squirrels are already beginning to lay away stores of food, unusual so early. Woodchucks, he says, are already taking to their holes and they never do he says till September unless winter comes on early. According to his guess winter will set in early in October and stick right to the job in a good old fashioned way.

SAGE FOR DARKENING THE HAIR.

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great-grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance, they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair with wonderfully beneficial effect. Nowadays we don't have to resort to the old-time, tiresome method of gathering the herbs and making the brew. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves, and all we have to do is to call for the ready made product. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of Sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy. This preparation is sold by all first-class druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

For sale and recommended by Hargrove & Mullin.

PUBLIC WELFARE TO BE GUARDED

New Railroad Law Puts People Above Corporations.

SHIVELY'S "JOKER" RECALLED

Republican Measure Saved From Secret Plotters Who Tried to Slip in an Amendment to Permit Revival of Old Rebating Evil—Shively Tool of Tricky Interests, Ruthlessly Exposed.

The railway law passed by the recent congress will vitally affect the whole transportation system and commerce of the country. It marks an amazing advance in the movement on the part of the American people to control for the public welfare the highways of trade and travel.

The new railroad law creates a Commerce Court. To this court five judges are assigned from among United States circuit judges, by the chief justice of the United States. They are to serve five years. This new court has the exclusive function of hearing and deciding cases brought for the purpose of enforcing or setting aside orders of the interstate commerce commission and certain other classes of cases for the regulation of interstate commerce. Appeals from this court may be taken to the United States supreme court.

In these cases the United States itself is to be a party, represented by the attorney general's office. The interstate commerce commission and shippers may be represented by counsel. Common carriers are to have in reach of the court agents on whom papers can be served. Telegraph and telephone companies are subject to the same act.

The law says that common carriers cannot charge more for a short haul than for a long haul, except as they can show the commission the justice of the charge.

A railway, competing against a water route, and cutting rates on any kind of freight, is not permitted to increase such rates unless it can show the change is due to causes other than a removal of water competition.

The new railway regulation law provides also a commission to take up the physical valuation of the railroads, the problem of remedying the stock-watering evil, and other important phases of regulation.

The people regard the railways as public highways to be administered not only for gain, but for the benefit of the public. There is a proper demand for what the people regard as public rights in the public highways. This demand is being recognized by the Republican party. The expression of that theory is found in the new railroad law.

The people these days are voting for the man who believes in railway rate regulation and in the management of public utilities for the public welfare first and for private profit second.

Indiana voters keep in mind at this time the fact that Democrats from Indiana in the congress voted against the railroad law. Senator Shively, Democrat, gained some notoriety in connection with this legislation. He was caught trying to slip a joker into the measure to permit the old wrong of rebating. He was exposed to the whole country in this despicable business, and was held up to public scorn because of it.

Not much of a record for a public servant, is it? But this is Shively's record on this law.

When he might have served the people he acted as the tricky tool of the corporations.

It was unfortunate for Shively and the Democratic party that his queer deal found him out. But it was decidedly fortunate for the people that wary friends of honest regulation were on the job and ready to disclose the evil in the Shively rebating amendment.

Democratic Dissension.

Democrats are falling down completely in their efforts to hoodwink the people with the idea that a landslide is coming that will sweep them into power in the lower house. Their party in the west as in the east is in no shape for a good fight. It is as hopelessly divided now as it was in the last presidential election. The Democrats of Minnesota proved this at their convention—in Minneapolis when a mob ruled the body and where for three hours the chairman was unable to bring the delegates into any kind of order. Between hisses and cheers the convention made a mess of it and the man nominated for governor promptly declined to run. Democrats after this exhibition and others nearly as bad would do well to look to their own ranks instead of counting on defection from Republican ranks to pull their candidate through.—Baltimore American.

Cars Wanted.

The American Railway Association has sent out warning that the fall traffic is sure to cause a serious car shortage. Democrats were talking of idle cars a few weeks ago, at a time when railroad companies were gathering

WOULD WARD OFF POLITICS

An Effort Will be Made to Keep Any Partisan Views Out of Convention.

TO BE HELD IN SAINT PAUL

Suffragists Claim That They Are Not Working For Any Political Gain Whatever.

Saint Paul, Minn., Aug. 31—Are the suffragists politicians working for a political end?

"They are," says Bernard N. Baker, president of the National Conservation Congress which meets in Saint Paul, September 5 to 9.

"Not a bit of it," declare the women.

With the convention only a few days off, this is the way the controversy between the suffragists who want to be represented on the program and the officers of the congress stand. President Baker has said that the suffragists will not be allowed representation in the congress and so far as the officers who are in St. Paul know he has not changed his mind.

It is the aim of the officers to keep politics out of the proceedings if possible. They recognize that this will be a difficult task. It is in fact the aim of the persons prominently connected with this congress to at least lay the foundation at the Saint Paul convention for what will be America's largest and most effective association, one in which the membership will be as wide as the United States. It will be larger than any organization of labor, more concentrated in its operative capacity than a federation of miners, or an association of business interests, and more efficient in procuring desirable legislation even than a political party. It will be greater than these, according to anticipation, because it will contain the bulk of the men and women interested in the various activities by which life is sustained.

People from every nook and corner of the United States are coming to the Saint Paul convention. For every 4000 persons there will be one representative in the congress. Every phase of the conservation question will be represented on the list of delegates. Some of those coming to Saint Paul are affected by the ravages of destructive insects. Some are made poorer by the worn out condition of the soil on which they live. There are those who would like to prevent the useless slaughter of game. Some are unable to provide for the shelter they need because of the high prices of lumber made high through forest fires and the waste in cutting timber. Many would enjoy greater luxuries if the stream, once navigable, could carry their commerce. Then there are those who would wage a more strenuous war on preventable diseases, like tuberculosis and typhoid.

Gifford Pinchot, who is president of the National Conservation association, according to his friends, would be the logical head of such an organization. The National Conservation association has been striving to further all legislation wisely designed to diminish sickness, prevent accident and increase the welfare of American life, believing that human efficiency, health and happiness are natural resources quite as important as forests, waters, lands and minerals.

Modern Methods in Advertising

The lack of system which characterizes the expenditures for advertising of the average business man is appalling. If you ask him how much he spent in 1908 for giving his business publicity he will generally not be able to guess closer than one of this customers. And even if he did know to the dollar, the chances are ten to one he would have gained his knowledge by backward calculation. On other words, instead of saying, "My appropriation was such and such," he will tell you he has carefully ascertained the amount from his ledger.

Now when a merchant takes out insurance he carries enough to cover his stock. He knows when he has enough. He ought to cover his year's business with advertising as he covers his stock with insurance. As he starts the year he should estimate the net profit on his year's business and then take a liberal portion on this amount as his appropriation for advertising. With an eye on his past business by seasons he should then apportion the amounts to be expended during the different months. He should also roughly determine the amounts to be used in the various methods he expects to employ. This is the logical starting point.

Just how many dollars to spend in advertising must be answered largely by the taste of the merchant and the nature and conditions of the business. Let it be sufficient to carry weight, but not beyond what the profit and investment justify.

HOW TO AVOID TUBERCULOSIS

Interesting Exhibit Being Prepared For State Fair.

OBJECT LESSON FOR VISITORS

All Persons Attending the Indiana State Fair Will Be Given an Opportunity to Investigate the Latest and Most Approved Method of Combating the Dread White Plague With Little Outlay.

Indianapolis, Sept. 1.—With the receipt this week of the special bulletin of the Indiana state board of the American Red Cross, to be issued to state fair visitors, the preparations of the board for a week of education of the people on how to combat consumption will be completed. The shack being constructed on the state fair ground as an illustration of how any person, with a small outlay, may prepare for outdoor sleeping as a means of aiding recovery from the disease, will be completed within a few days and stocked with the display prepared by the state board of health for use by instructors in lectures to the people of the state.

The special bulletin has been edited and compiled by Dr. Henry Moore, president of the Indiana tuberculosis hospital commission, which constructed the state tuberculosis hospital at Rockville. The Indiana Red Cross Christmas seal committee, of which Noble C. Butler is chairman, has aided Dr. Moore in the preparation of the work, and every bulletin issued will be stamped with one of the 1910 seals, samples of which have been received.

The purpose of the bulletin is to teach the fathers and mothers of the state how tuberculosis may be prevented and how it may be cured. A chapter is devoted to the former, with a chart reproduced from the state board of health showing the prevalence in Indiana of tuberculosis over all other diseases. A second chart reproduced from the same source shows how the disease causes the greatest number of deaths during the years immediately following the beginning of the school period of the child, and gradually recedes after the school years are passed. The most widely approved methods of caring for children to prevent their becoming victims of the disease and high authorities concerning the care of tubercular persons in the early stages of the disease, when almost every case is curable, are given fully in another section. General directions approved by the best physicians and specialists are also included.

The circulars will be distributed free to persons interested in the anti-tuberculosis movement.

THEY BELIEVE IN HIM

The People of Indiana Eager to Admit Senator Beveridge's Worth.

[Special Correspondence.]

Indianapolis, September 1.—"The state of Indiana will roll up 40,000 Republican plurality," says Lewis H. Collins, state agent for a large company which sells traction engines and farm machinery. "The farmers are strong for the Republican ticket. Thinking much in the country and in the shops are of a mind to continue things as they are, so far as prosperity goes. We find wherever we go that Senator Beveridge is a positive strength to the Republican party. Thinking men of all parties acknowledge his worth and public service, and admit that he is a valuable public servant who has been honest and sincere in working for the people. In a state where the population is sensible and careful and discriminating, as in the case of Indiana, it is the man of force, convictions and aggressive honesty that appeals to the voters. The reason for Senator Beveridge's great strength lies in the fact that the people believe in him, and that they have had evidence of his will to do and of his ability to do good work for them."

"This is not to say that all the politicians have realized that Senator Beveridge is a Republican party asset and strength. They know he has always been a vote-getter. They know he is popular. But they do not by any means acknowledge what they will admit later, that he is the biggest force for victory the Republican party has at its command today. The truth is beginning to come to the surface. The light is beginning to break. We find the same story everywhere. The farmers tend to endorse Republican policies in practical administration, and they strongly approve Senator Beveridge and Theodore Roosevelt."

Mr. Collins, whose headquarters are in Indianapolis, has agents in every town and city of Indiana and Ohio. His agents are local observers of business and political conditions. They are generally local politicians and live hustlers. They deal with men who are able to buy farming machinery, and in their dealings with live and progressive farmers they talk politics. It is a part of the business of the dealer in farming implements, to find out the political probabilities so far as he is able to do so. Plans made ahead of elections are based on political information received from local agents. If the trend is toward uncertainty, panic and depression, the manufacturer must know it. If the prospects are for maintained prosperity, sound business conditions and fair prices, the manufacturer wants to know that, and acts accordingly in preparing for the future. Mr. Collins and his agents are business men. They are cool headed and dispassionate. They are not enthusiasts nor extreme partisans, boasting for political purposes. They seek facts and give facts to the central office without color and without prejudice. So it may be judged that their testimony is fair and conservative.

This is the good word from the farming districts. There have been encouraging reports from labor men, who long have been friendly to Senator Beveridge, and favorable to Republican policies. E. C. Watkins, a newspaper man, who has been touring the Eleventh district on the search of political information, reports his findings among the wage-earners. He says:

"While I knew Senator Beveridge was strong with the labor men, I did not realize his actual high standing with labor until I had talked with the labor men themselves. They are for Senator Beveridge with all their vigor. They are not slow in saying so. They do not hesitate to announce that they are working for Senator Beveridge, and Democrats are as strong for him, if possible, as the Republicans are. The conditions proved a revelation to me. I think there is mighty good reason for Republican hopefulness in the situation. There is no doubt about the reality of labor's attitude. More than that, the labor men are extremely friendly to John L. Thompson, the Republican candidate for congress. His relations with labor have been most cordial, and some of his most active workers today are labor men with whom he has had relations, as an employer, for many years."

Walter S. Neal, former treasurer of Grant county, while in the city yesterday, talked a little politics at Republican state headquarters. "Our legislative ticket will be elected by a better vote than that of two years ago," says Mr. Neal. "We find the labor men most friendly and willing to help. Many of the men and the forces inimical to the legislative ticket have departed from the field since 1908. There is no question as to where the candidates stand. They are pledged to the things the people regard as most important. The lines are drawn and the issue is clear. We have good reason to expect the independents to be our way in large numbers, and the Bryan element is inclined to stay at home or vote the Republican ticket in considerable force, as it did in 1904 when the same anti-Bryan forces were in the Democratic saddle. The Republicans in Grant county expect to elect their ticket by a larger plurality than was shown two years ago. We expect to elect a congressman, and to gain a joint senator and a joint representative."

When the Wright brothers began practice with their aeroplanes at Indianapolis Motor Speedway recently Will H. Mr. Brown announces that he will build three other wagons at once as several county fair associations in Ohio, Kentucky and Kansas are asking to have exhibitions by this unique creation.

Farmers Gained Knowledge In Wheat Special Lectures

Many farmers took advantage of the Wheat Improvement Special, which came through here late Tuesday afternoon on a special train furnished by the Pennsylvania railroad. The large audience listened intently to the discourse and gained many points to aid in practical farming.

D. B. Johnson, who spoke in one of the cars, introduced his lecture by telling his hearers that the average yield of wheat in this State is 13.3 bushels per acre. "According to carefully gathered statistics the cost of production, including the process of preparing the ground, seeding, fertilizing and threshing, has been shown to be $12.37 per acre," he said. "Thus it is seen that with a yield of slightly more than thirteen bushels, even at a dollar a bushel, a miserably small profit is derived from wheat growing." He showed that while our average yield is very small, the yield of other states is but little larger, as the average for the United States is but 13.9 per acre. He drew a contrast between the yield in this country and that in Germany, where it is 28.4, and in Great Britain, where it is 32.6. "But," he said, "fifty years ago these countries were confronted with the same problem which is looming up in America today, that of the small production of soil. By the systematic application, however, of the best known modern methods they have brought the yield up to the present high standard."

The rest of the lecture was taken up with a review of the different essential means and methods by which the Purdue agricultural station, after many years of experimenting, believes that the wheat crop may be increased. The first essential condition, he said, was the good seed bed, which includes a solid surface, with plenty of humus and plant food. Clover is one of the best methods to gain a good bed, he said and also a liberal use of manure. When wheat is sowed in corn it is always advisable to cut up the corn.

The second important detail towards the accomplishment of a good yield is to be sure that good seed is sowed. By the chart it was seen that in Minnesota, where only heavy wheat was sowed in experiments the increase was 4.6 bushels per acre; in Nebraska the increase was 5.1, and in other States it ran about the same. In these experiments only the large, plump grain was used.

The fanning mill was used as a simple and effective means of selecting honest seed wheat. Mr. Johnson stated that in many cases to eliminate from one-half to a third would prove to be a paying proposition, as the experiments show that this sort of seed resulted in an average increase of four bushels per acre. A number of the different varieties of wheat which have been proven satisfactory were mentioned, among them being Rudy with an average of 30, Pearl's Prolife averaging 26.7, Michigan Amber averaging 26.5, and Farmer's Friend averaging 26.5.

The complex subject of crop rotation was then taken up. According to experiments at Purdue for a period of twenty years the following results were obtained: A continuous crop of wheat averaged 15.6 bushels per acre; corn and wheat averaged 14.2; the combination of corn, oats and wheat resulted in an average for wheat of 16.5, a slight increase; of corn, oats, wheat and clover averaged 19.8 which was the highest, and when grass was added to the last combination the wheat average fell to 18.8. This experiment is highly interesting, as it sets forth the exact rotation which is most valuable. It was shown further in this experiment that when fertilizer was used that the resulting increase was the same in each case.

Fertilizer is deemed an important factor in successful wheat growing. Statistics gathered from ten counties of this state show that the average yield of wheat where fertilizer was not used was 16.4 per acre, while in the same vicinities where it was applied the yield averaged 28 bushels. This is one of the most convincing arguments advanced in behalf of fertilizer. Altho phosphoric acid seems to give the best results in wheat raising the element to be used must be determined by the particular need of the soil on which it is to be applied. Mr. Johnson made a plea for a liberal use of fertilizer and introduced the chart to back up his statements. It was shown by a table that on an acre of ground, where 100 pounds of the proper fertilizer were used the yield was 22.4 bushels, while where 200 pounds were used the yield was 31 bushels, yet the use of 400 pounds increased the yield only to 34 bushels. In the opinion of Mr. Johnson, between 250 and 300 pounds is sufficient in any case. Nitrogen is never needed, he said, when clover is in the seed bed as it supplies all of that element needed.

The lecturer then took up the diseases and pests which are a great hinderance to a good crop. A sure cure for stinking smut is to spread the wheat on the floor and sprinkle it with a solution of one pound of formalin in fifty gallons of water until thoroly moist.

"If farmers," said Mr. Johnson, "would not sow a grain of wheat until the first of October there would be no such thing as the Hessian fly. Heavy fertilization is also a good thing for the prevention of the fly."

"The joint worm, another destructive pest, can be combatted with by destroying all the afflicted straw and stubble during the winter," said Mr. Johnson, "as the tiny bug makes his home in the joint of the straw during the cold season. All stubble fields which are known to be infected with the joint worm should be plowed under and the straw stacks should even be burned, if necessary, to get them out of the way."

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

EGG IN AN EGG.

(Shelbyville Republican.)

In breaking a boiled egg, Charles F. Kappas, a St. Paul business man, was surprised to find what he supposed to be another egg. The shape and color, however, differed from the regulation egg. The queer object was perfectly round and was about the size of a marble. The shell was hard. When broken open it was found to contain a substance similar to the white of an egg.

Goldie and Oma Johnson, who were tried in juvenile court Friday before Special Judge Robert S. Hunter, will have sentence passed upon them next Monday, where they were ordered to report. Fifteen witnesses for and against the defendants were heard Friday. The girls are charged with delinquency and live in Knights-town.

BIRDS GOING SOUTH.

(Anderson Herald.)

Thursday night residents were astonished at the sound of birds passing over the city and on listening they discovered that duck, wild geese and cranes could all be distinguished in the flight southward.

It is said that the southward flight of migratory birds was never known in Anderson at so early a date in the fall. It is believed that it may mean an early winter, while some think the birds are going south earlier than usual because of the forest fires in the North and Northwest that fill the woods and marshes with smoke to which the fowls do not take kindly.

Saturday afternoon George got soaked here. This deal was accomplished alone. He was incarcerated by Chief Johnson and this morning before Mayor Mendenhall, pleaded guilty to an intoxication charge. His number drew a fine of $2 to which $10 costs were attached.

WILL LIBERATE PARTRIDGES HERE

State Fish and Game Commissioner Plans to Turn 3000 Pair Loose in State in Fall.

ARE BETTER THAN PHEASANTS

State Fish and Game Commissioner George Miles has contracted for 3000 pairs of Hungarian partridges, which will be liberated on 200 state preserves this fall. In wild thickets of the Austrian provinces peasants are now catching the partridges that they may spend the next cold season in snug nests on Hoosier farms.

Commissioner Miles found he could save $1.50 a pair by buying the partridges for liberation in the fall, and furthermore, he believes they will live better out in the open than they would penned up during the winter, so the State is getting better birds now than it would in the spring.

A statute provides one-third of the revenue collected from sportsmen who pay $1 a year for hunting licenses shall be expended in restocking the State with game, and from this fund the Hungarian partridges are bought. The commissioner believes partridges stay and multiply better than pheasants, a large number of which have been introduced in Indiana. The pheasants have proved elusive. The former commissioner, Z. T. Sweeney, spent considerable effort in a thorough trial of them.

The army is experimenting with a new shell designed to pierce a vessel or building and then scatter scores of bullets carried behind its solid steel head.

DULL SEASON WILL SOON PASS

Hot Weather and Vacation Seasons

Are Drawing to Close With Disappearance of Dog Days.

ARE PREPARING FOR FALL

Merchants and Manufacturers Are Anticipating a Resumption of Spring Rush in all Lines.

Hot weather, the slow season and vacation times are all present factors which are working at the present time to put the brakes on business activity and for the last two weeks in all sections of the city and in practically every industry a decided slump in business has been felt. Although commercial and industrial Rushville is moving slower at the present time than she has for many months, business men and some of the leading manufacturers claim that the annual slow season is not nearly so marked this year as it has been for many seasons in the past.

Dog days are even being felt in the mercantile establishments, which up until a few weeks ago were enjoying a brisk and profitable trade. Many clerks and managers of stores are taking their vacations at the present time, and owners of all kinds of mercantile establishments are glad to give their clerks the opportunity to enjoy an annual outing for there is not enough trade in many of the stores at the present time to justify an employer retaining a full force of salesmen.

From the report received from the passenger departments from all the different railroads in the city it is evident that hundreds of people are taking advantage of the cheap rates that are offered during vacation season and that large crowds are enjoying their summer's vacation near northern lakes and other well known pleasure resorts.

"It's always the darkest just before the day and it is always quiet just before the storm approaches," said a Rushville business man the other day in referring to the slack trade at the present time. He was very optimistic and referred to the increase of business in the fall as a veritable deluge.

CHAPTER II. FOR HER COUNTRY.

"COUNT, must I tell you again not to broach that subject? There can be no alliance between Ehrenstein and Jugendheit."

"Why?" asked Count von Herbeck, chancellor.

"One of my reasons is that I do not want any alliance with a country so perfidious as Jugendheit. What! I make overtures—I, who have been so cruelly wronged all these years? You are mad."

"But what positive evidence have you that Jugendheit wronged you?"

"Positive? Have I eyes and ears? Have I not seen and read and heard?"

"Your highness knows that I look only to the welfare of the country. In the old days it was a foregone conclusion that this alliance was to be formed. Now, you persist in averring that the late king was the chief conspirator in abducting her serene highness, aided by Arnsberg, whose successor I have the honor to be. I have never yet seen any proofs. Show me something which absolutely convicts them and I'll surrender."

"On your honor?"

"My word."

"The duke struck a bell."

"My secretary and tell him to bring me the packet marked A. He will understand."

The duke was frank in his likes and dislikes. He hated secrets, and he loved an opponent who engaged him in the open. It was this extraordinary rectitude which made the duke so powerful an aid to Bismarck in the days that followed. The man of iron needed this sort of character as a cover and a buckler to his own duplicities.

Herbeck was an excellent foil. He was as silent and secretive as sand. He moved, as it were, in circles, thus always eluding dangerous corners. He was tall, angular, with a thin, immobile countenance, well guarded by his gray eyes and straight lips. He was a born financier, with almost limitless ambition, though only he himself knew how far this ambition reached. Twice had he saved Ehrenstein from the dragnet of war and with honor.

The secretary came in and laid a thin packet of papers on the chancellor's desk.

The secretary bowed and withdrew.

The duke stirred the papers angrily, took one of them and spread it out with a rasp.

"Look at that. Whose writing, I ask?"

Herbeck ran over it several times. At length he opened a drawer in his desk, sorted some papers and brought out a yellow letter.

This he laid down beside the other.

"Yes, they are alike. This will be Arnsberg. But—mildly—who may say that it is not a running forgery?"

"Forgery!" roared the duke. "Read this one from the late king of Ju-gendheit to Arnsberg then if you still doubt."

Herbeck read slowly and carefully.

Then he rose and walked to the nearest window, studying the letter again in the sharper light.

Herbeck returned to his chair. "I wish that you had shown me these long ago. You accused the king?"

"Certainly, but he denied it."

"In a letter?"

"Yes. Here, read it."

Herbeck compared the two. "Where did you find these?"

"In Arnsberg's desk," returned the duke—"Arnsberg, my boyhood playmate, the man I loved and trusted and advanced to the highest office in my power. Is that not the way? Well, dead or alive, 10,000 crowns to him who brings Arnsberg to me dead or alive."

"You are very bitter," said Herbeck.

"And have I not cause? Did not my wife die of a broken heart, and did I not become a broken man? You do not know all, Herbeck—not quite all. Franz also sought the hand of the Princess Sofia. He, too, loved her, but I won. Well, his revenge must have been sweet to him."

"But your daughter has been restored to her own."

"Due to your indefatigable efforts alone. Ah, Herbeck, nothing will ever fill up the gap between, nothing will ever restore the mother." The duke bowed his head.

Herbeck opened another drawer and took forth a long hood envelope creased and sealed.

"Your highness, here is a letter from the prince regent of Jugendheit formally asking the hand of the Princess Hildegarde for his nephew Frederick, who will shortly be crowned. My advice is to accept, to let bygones be bygones."

"Write the prince that I respectfully decline."

"Do nothing in haste, your highness. Temporarily. Say that you desire some time to think about the matter. You can change your mind at any time. A reply like this commits you to nothing, whereas your abrupt refusal will only widen the breach."

"The wider the breach the better."

"No, no, your highness; the past has disturbed you. We can stand war, and it is possible that we might win, even against Jugendheit, but war at this late day would be a colossal blunder. Victory would leave us where we began thirty years ago. And an insult to Jugendheit might precipitate war."

"Have your way, then."

The duke departed, stirred as he had been since the restoration of the princess. He sought his daughter. She was in the music room. "My child," he began, taking Hildegarde's hand and drawing her toward a window seat, "the king of Jugendheit asks for your hand."

"Then I am to marry the king of Jugendheit?" There was little joy in her voice.

"Ah, we have not gone so far as that! The king, through his uncle, has simply made a proposal."

"It is for you to decide, father. Whatever your decision is I shall abide by it."

"It is a hard lesson we have to learn, my child. We cannot always marry where we love. Diplomacy and politics make other plans. But fortunately for you you love no one yet, and the king is young, handsome, they say, and rich. Politically speaking, it would be a great match."

"I am in your hands. You know what is best."

The duke was poignantly disappointed. Why did she not refuse outright, as became one of the house of Ehrenstein?

"What is he like?" she asked.

"That no one seems to know. He has been to his capital but twice in ten years. The young king has been in Paris most of the time. That's the way they educate kings these days. They teach them all the vices. Your father loves you, and if you are inclined toward his majesty, if it is in your heart to become a queen, I shall not let my prejudices stand in the way."

She caught up his hand with a strange passion and kissed it.

"Father, I do not want to marry any one," wistfully. "But a queen?" she added thoughtfully. "Would it be for the good of the state?"

Here was reason. "Yes; my objections are merely personal," said the duke.

"For the good of my country I am ready to make any sacrifice."

"Very well, but weigh the matter carefully. There is never any retracing a step of this kind." He paused and then said:

"You are all I have, girl."

"My father?" She stroked his cheek.

The restoration of the Princess Hildegarde of Ehrenstein had been the sensation of Europe, as had been in the earlier days her remarkable abduction. For sixteen years the search had gone on fruitlessly. In a garret in Dresden the agents of Herbeck found her, a singer in the chorus of the opera. The newspapers and illustrated weeklies raged about her for awhile, elaborated the story of her struggles, the mysterious remittances which had from time to time saved her from direst poverty, her ambition, her education which by dint of hard work she had acquired. The duke accused Franz of Jugendheit. Search as they would, the duke and the chancellor never traced the source of the remittances. The duke held stubbornly that the sender of these benefactions was moved by the impulse of a guilty conscience and that this guilty conscience was in Jugendheit.

And was the girl happy with all her new grandeur, with all these lackeys and attendants and environs? Sometimes she longed for the freedom and lack care of her Dresden garret, her musician friends, the studios, the crash and glitter of the opera.

She was lovely enough to inspire fervor and homage and love in all masculine minds. She was witty and talented. Carmichael said she was one of the most beautiful women in all Europe.

She was still in the window seat when the chancellor was announced.

"Your highness," he said, "I am come to announce to you that there waits for you a high place in the affairs of the world."

"The second crown in Jugendheit?"

"Your father?"

"Yes. He leaves the matter wholly in my hands."

"It is for the good of the state. A princess like yourself must never wed an inferior."

"Would a man who was brave and kind and resourceful, but without a title—would he be an inferior?"

"Assuredly politically. And I regret to say that your marriage could never be else than a matter of politics."

"I am, then, simply a certificate of exchange?"

"The king of Jugendheit is young. I do not see how he can help loving you the moment he knows you. Who can?" And the chancellor smiled.

"But he may not be heart whole."

"He will be politically."

"Politics, politics—how I hate the word! Sometimes I regret my garret."

The chancellor wrinkled his lips.

"Will you consent to this marriage?"

"Would it do any good to reject it?"

"On the contrary, it would do Ehrenstein great harm."

"Give me a week," wearily.

"A week!" There was joy on the chancellor's face now, unmasked, unconcealed. "Oh, when the moment comes that I see the crown of Jugendheit on your beautiful head all my work shall not have been in vain. There is one thing more, your highness."

"And that?"

"There must not be so many rides in the morning with his excellency Herr Carmichael."

There was a sinister note of warning in the chancellor's voice.

The Black Eagle (Zum Schwartz Adler) in the Adlergasse was 200 years old and had been in the Bauer family all that time.

Had the manager, Frau Bauer, or Frau Wirtin, as she was familiarly called, been masculine she would have been lightly dubbed Bauer VII. She was a widow. She was thirty-eight, plump, pretty and wise.

F. E. Wolcott's Drug Store.

swam in a blue haze of smoke, which rose to the blackened rafters, hung with many and various sausages, cheeses and dried vegetables. Dishes clattered, there was a buzzing of voices, a scraping of feet and chairs, a banging of tankards.

Gretchen came in, a little better dressed than in the daytime, the change consisting of coarse stockings and shoes of leather, of which she was correspondingly proud.

"Will you want me, Frau Wirtin, for a little while tonight?" she asked.

"Thill O. Half a crown as usual."

Gretchen sought the kitchen and found an apron and cap. These half crowns were fine things to pick up occasionally, for it was only upon occasions that she worked at the Black Eagle. In an obscure corner sat the young vintner. His face brightened as he saw the goose girl. In the very corner itself was the mountaineer who possessed a Swiss watch and gave golden coins to goose girls. He was busily engaged in gnawing the leg of a chicken.

Carmichael was often a visitor at the Black Eagle. Later he stepped into the big hall in his evening clothes. "Good evening, Frau Wirtin."

"Good evening, your excellency." She was quite fluttered when this fine young man spoke to her. "What is on your mind?"

"Many things." He saw Gretchen. "The goose girl," he murmured suddenly. "Is Gretchen one of your waitresses?"

"She comes in once in awhile. She's a good girl. I'm glad to help her."

Gretchen saw Carmichael and nodded.

"I shall be at yonder table," he said, indicating the vacant chair. Carmichael made his way to the table. Across the room he had not recognized the vintner, but now he remembered. He had crowded him against a wall two or three days before. The vintner turned back the lid of his stein and drank slowly.

Carmichael sat down. Now, this vintner's face was something familiar. Carmichael stirred his memory. It was not in Dreiberg that he had seen him before. But where?

Gretchen arrived with the tankard, which she sat down at Carmichael's elbow.

"Will you not join me, herr?" he invited.

"Thank you," said the vintner.

Gretchen took up the empty tankard and made off. Carmichael was first to speak.

"She is the handsomest peasant I ever saw or knew."

"You know her?" There was a spark in the vintner's eyes.

"Only for a few days. She interests me." Carmichael produced a pipe and lighted it.

"Ah, yes; the pretty peasant girl always interests you gentlemen." There was a note of bitterness. "Did you come here to seek love?"

"You seem to possess a peculiar interest."

The vintner flushed. "I have that right," with an air which rather mystified Carmichael.

"That explains everything. I do not recollect seeing you before in the Black Eagle."

"I am from the north; a vintner, and there is plenty of work here in the valleys late in September."

"The grape," mused Carmichael. "You will never learn how to press it as they do in France. It is wine there; it is vinegar this side of the Rhine."

"France," said the vintner moodily. "Do you think there will be any France in the future?"

Carmichael laughed. "France is an incurable cosmic malady; it will always be. It may be beaten, devastated, throttled, but it will not die."

"You are fond of France?"

"Very."

"Do you think it wise to say so here?"

"I am the American consul; nobody minds my opinions."

"The American consul," repeated the vintner.

Gretchen set the tankards down, and Carmichael put out a silver crown.

"And do not bother about the change."

"All Americans are rich," she said soberly.

The vintner laughed pleasantly.

BOSSES SELECT NEW CANDIDATE

Taggart Comes West to Meet Educational Crisis.

GREATHOUSE TAGGART CHOICE

Governor Marshall Left Out by Democratic State Committee—Aley's Resignation Accepted and the Vacancy Filled Without Delay—Prof. Tapy Gets No Hearing, Though Urged by Governor.

Thomas Taggart had his way in the matter of filling the vacancy on the Democratic state ticket, and picked Charley Greathouse, his good friend, to take the place of Dr. R. J. Aley, resigned, as a candidate for superintendent of public instruction.

Mr. Taggart traveled from Massachusetts to Indiana to make the selections. He refused to leave it to Governor Marshall, who wished to place Prof. George H. Tapy on the ticket. Mr. Taggart refused even to trust the state committee. He came in person and fixed it for Charley, the Indianapolis grain broker.

Dr. Aley defeated Greathouse for the nomination in 1906, after Greathouse had tried and failed to land in a former campaign. It is an interesting phase of bossism in Indiana Democracy that after failing to nominate his man through the votes of delegates in state convention, Mr. Taggart finds it easy to place Greathouse on the ticket after all. Mr. Greathouse was not the choice of his party in 1906. He was rejected. But he is Taggart's choice, and on the ticket he goes, whether the party wants him or not.

Governor Marshall's friends were not in on the Greathouse deal. They asked that the matter be delayed a few days until the Democratic governor could return to the state and present the claims of Prof. Tapy to the committee. No Marshall man was in the Taggart committee meeting. The Twelfth district was not represented at all. Taggart had either proxies or his followers on the job, and they did his will without hesitating.

Mr. Taggart refused to wait to take counsel with the governor. Dr. Aley failed to keep his agreement with Marshall to hold up his resignation until Saturday. So between the haste of Taggart and the submission of Aley to pressure, the governor was justified in continuing his indefinite Petoskey outing.

DISCORD IN DELAWARE.

Democrats Dump Byron Moffett and Bosses Boost for Joe O'Day.

Byron Moffett, Democratic chairman of Delaware county, was forced to resign and get off the committee. Labor men refused to countenance Moffett and when the Taggart men in Delaware county found Mr. Moffett refused to do their bidding, he was given short shrift and was forced to walk the plank. The opposition of labor was given as an excuse for dumping Moffett. But it became known at the same time that Moffett had displeased the Democratic bosses by refusing to certify the nomination of Joe O'Day as the Democratic candidate for representative.

O'Day's nomination was contested by Dr. E. L. Brandon, of Daleville. Moffett took Brandon's side of a bitter controversy. The Democratic bosses in the county sided with O'Day because he is their man. So Moffett had to go.

The Brandon people assert that when O'Day tied Brandon on the first ballot in the convention, O'Day had one illegal vote,—that of an alternate whose corresponding delegate also voted. The mistake was learned later. In the meantime, O'Day had been nominated on the second ballot over Brandon. Brandon demands the nomination as his by the majority given him on the first ballot. He says there should have been no second. It is now conceded that neither O'Day nor Brandon could be elected under the existing circumstances. As for Moffett, he is out of it, and there is all sorts of trouble over the choice of his successor.

Republicans of Harrison county have nominated Ed. S. Tuell for representative.

MORE ABOUT PRICES.

The Democratic Seymour Herald tells of the sale by Claude Swengel to Frank Abel, of Jonesville, of two carloads of hogs for more than $3,000. There were 120 head, and they averaged about 278 pounds. They brought a little more than 9 cents a pound, or an average of more than $25 a hog. It was stated that Mr. Swengel had marketed more than $6,000 worth of hogs at or near the $9 per 100 figure.

Of course the Democratic paper was not telling all this as an argument against $9 pork or in favor of a return to the low price era. It was merely a news item, run in the course of a newspaper's newsy day.

TIME TO ACT

Dont Wait for the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness. Profit by Rushville People's Experience.

Occasional attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are common early symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time but return with greater intensity. If there are symptoms of dropsy—puffy swellings below the eyes, bloating of limbs and ankles, or any part of the body, don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and keep up the treatment until the kidneys are well, when your old time health and vigor will return. Cures in Rushville prove the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

Mrs. Jacob Roth, West First St., R. F. D. No. 4, Rushville, Ind., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been a standard remedy in my family for the past two years and I am firmly convinced that there is no other medicine on the market equal to it. We have taken Doan's Kidney Pills time and time again and they have never failed to give relief from kidney and bladder trouble. I have such great faith in the curative powers of this preparation that I never fail to speak a good word for it when I hear anyone complaining of kidney trouble."

ROOSEVELT HAS BURNED BRIDGES

His Split With Taft Now Considered Definite.

THE KEYNOTE OF A NEW PARTY

Osawatimie Speech Is Thus Regarded by Political Observers Who Declare That the New Nationalism Has Begun With T. R. as Its Prophet—These Same Observers Say the Colonel Cannot Indorse Administration.

Osawatimie, Kas., Sept. 1.—The new nationalism has begun. Theodore Roosevelt, speaking in the town where John Brown stood himself against the Missouri raiders in 1856, delivered himself of utterances which are construed here as the most radical he has ever made. He split with the administration and Mr. Taft. He will never endorse the administration for indeed he cannot now. Mr. Roosevelt will go along on his own hook and the regulars can follow him if they want to. He stated part of his platform here. Mr. Roosevelt declared the American people are right in demanding a new nationalism without which they cannot hope to deal with any new problems. He declared also that the new nationalism puts the national need before sectional or personal need. He said that he is impatient of the utter confusion that results from legislatures attempting to treat national issues. He did not mention Mr. Taft. A crowd of red hot Kansas insurgents listened to the colonel make this impassioned speech and they yelled for all they were worth. The colonel piled point upon point in his address and when it was over he said that he had nothing to add because his remarks speak for themselves. It was put up to him that he had preached socialism, but he merely smiled. His unmistakable threat to break down the business of the land if its managers do not be good was simply a repetition of things he had said before on this trip. His break with the president was confirmed without a shadow of doubt. Governor Stubbs, Senator Bristow, Congressman Madison, Jas. R. Garfield, Gifford Pinchot and William Allen White were with him on the speaker's stand and rooted to beat the band. They led the applause whenever they got the chance. "Equalize opportunity," Mr. Roosevelt began; "destroy privilege!" While he stands for the square deal under the present rules of the game, he stands for having those rules changed. That was the first shot that was calculated to get the Kansans going and it did. They shook the trees with their shouts. The colonel then discussed railroad corporations, tariffs, income tax and publicity of campaign funds. He intimated that he favors the recall. He showed mighty clearly that on a good many matters he does not agree with President Taft and if he does he did not take occasion to say so. Roosevelt did not spare the members of Mr. Taft's cabinet. He took issue on certain things that Attorney General Wickersham has done, just as the insurgents took issue. He backed up the theories of his friends Garfield and Pinchot. He demanded the investigation of our financial system and he demanded that it be investigated right away. What Wall street thinks of these notions Mr. Roosevelt does not care a whoop. One of the things that created a deep impression on the men who listened to Mr. Roosevelt was his remark concerning the relations of property to human welfare. Very few understood this. "The man who wrongly holds that every human right is secondary to his profit," he shouted, "must now give way to the advocate of human welfare who rightly maintains that every man holds his property subject to the general right of the community to regulate its use to whatever degree the public welfare may require it." And when he went ahead and admitted the right to regulate the terms and conditions of labor they were even more deeply impressed. Mr. Roosevelt set forth his belief in a graduated income tax on swollen fortunes and a graduated inheritance tax on big fortunes. There must be a government supervision of capitalization not only of public service corporations, but of all corporations doing an interstate business. He said that he did not wish to see the nation forced into the ownership of railways if it can be avoided, but he does want a physical valuation. In regard to the tariff he expressed his dissatisfaction at the method of revising it. He said that it is the duty of congress to provide a method by which the interest of the whole people shall be all that receives consideration. He suggested a tariff commission wholly removed from political pressure or improper business influence. In the matter of campaign publicity Mr. Roosevelt desired public accounting before and after the election. While the colonel did not employ the word "recall," it is understood he meant just that when he said: "I believe that the prompt removal of unfaithful or incompetent public servants should be made easy and sure in whatever way experience shall show to be the most expedient in any given class of cases."

JOSEPH H. CHOATE

Famous Lawyer Against Whom Charges Have Been Made.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 1.—The charges against Joseph H. Choate, made by James R. Watts of New York, a former client, which have had some publicity already, were presented at the meeting of the American Bar association here and referred to the committee on grievances. Watts alleges that Choate violated his confidence in litigation about twenty-five years ago, and asks that Mr. Choate be expelled from the American Bar association.

SIBLEY DENIES THAT CORRUPTION CHARGE

Says He Had No Knowledge of Big Expenditures.

Franklin, Pa., Sept. 1.—Joseph Crocker Sibley, who withdrew last week as the Republican candidate for congress in the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania district and was arrested the same day on a charge of conspiracy to bribe and corrupt voters, has issued a statement explaining his $42,500 campaign expenses and defending himself against the conspiracy charge. He makes the statement, he says, in the belief that he is "standing near the borderland of another career," and for fear that he may not live to testify in court, he wants his friends to know the truth. Sibley said he was taken sick at the beginning of the campaign and intrusted his candidacy to his private secretary, Frank H. Taylor, who is co-defendant in the conspiracy prosecution, telling him that he did not want an expensive campaign. He did not see Taylor more than six or eight times during the campaign, and on one of these times he asked Taylor how much money was being spent. Taylor replied he did not know, but whatever the amount, his opponent, Congressman Nelson P. Wheeler, was spending two or three dollars to Sibley's one. "From the day the campaign opened," says Sibley's statement, "until fifteen days after the campaign closed I knew of but two payments of money made on my account, and until the day of the filing of my account I had no intimate knowledge or belief that the total expenses of my campaign would exceed $20,000."

Three Workmen Killed. Jeffersonville, Ind., Sept. 1.—Thomas Townsend, Jr., Fred Baughe and Frank Uhl were killed and three other workmen were severely injured at the Portland cement mill at Speed's station when a heavy hoisting crane fell.

TERSE TELEGRAMS

John D. Rockefeller has been invited to address the conservation congress on the subject of conservation of capital. Fritz Augustus Heinze, the New York mining man, has married Mrs. Bernice Golden Henderson, an actress. Violent attacks by strikers on workers at Bilbao, Spain, led to frequent clashes with the troops, in which many were wounded. Unprecedented rainfall has swollen the French Broad river at Asheville, N. C., more than ten feet above the normal, causing much damage. In Caddo parish, Louisiana, there has just been drilled the largest gas well in the world. It has a pressure of 60,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily. The Upstate Public Service Commission has assumed jurisdiction under the new law over the operation of all telephone and telegraph companies operating in New York state. Flying sixty and one-half miles in one hour and eighteen minutes, Glenn H. Curtiss wrote aeronaut history by his flight from Euclid Beach, just east of Cleveland, to Cedar Point, off Sandusky bay. Postoffice inspectors have uncovered at Richland, a Wisconsin village, a matrimonial bureau graft by means of which hundreds of farmers throughout the northwest seeking wives have been swindled out of thousands of dollars.

MOVE TO OUST MINERS' UNION

Operators In Central Pennsylvania Field Act.

MAKE CHARGE OF CONSPIRACY

It is Alleged in Suits Brought Against President Feehan and Others That They "Conspired to Cause a Strike," Causing Owners to Lose Large Contracts—Service of Capias May Be Followed by Trouble.

Pittsburg, Sept. 1.—A move to oust the miners' union from the central Pennsylvania coal field for all time was begun here when attorneys, acting for six different coal companies, entered suits against Francis Feehan, president of district No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, against all members of his cabinet and against seventy-three additional persons, mainly leaders of strikers throughout the strike zones. It is charged that Feehan and the others "conspired to cause a strike" in the central Pennsylvania field. The suits have caused great excitement in the strike fields, as many of those accused are ignorant of American ways and methods and have with ease been convinced by advisers that they will likely be hanged in punishment for their alleged crimes. It will be a matter of no surprise if armed resistance is encountered when effort is made to serve papers on Italian, Swedish, Slavish and other foreign leaders. The operators assert that for years they conducted their mines in peace, always as non-union mines, but that during last March, President Feehan and others whom they assert have no business in the Irwin field, set about to organize a strike in that field, and they succeeded so well that the mines were soon idle and have continued partly idle ever since, causing owners to lose many large contracts, etc. It is dwelt on specially that on different occasions the strikers attacked officers of the coal companies when possible. The complaining companies also make the rather startling assertion that they have been assessed $5 per day for each deputy sheriff to guard the mines, but they have found that but $2.50 of each $5 went to the deputy employed. This missing money amounted frequently to $1,500 daily. The employers also admit losing many hundreds of thousands of dollars in broken contracts through the strike. President Feehan, after the suits were filed, came out with a statement asking the workmen of the country and all fair-minded people to stand by the miners' union in this fight, which he admits is directed against the very vitals of the miners' organization. Feehan asserts the employing operators have since the inception of the strike killed eight men and seven women, besides filling the poorhouses.

SHERMAN IN 1912

Sunny Jim's Presidential Boom Adopted by Oklahoma.

Guthrie, Okla., Sept. 1.—Oklahoma greeted Mr. Sherman here. He spoke two hours to 5,000 people last night at Hillard park and was followed by former Congressman J. E. Watson of Indiana. The applause indicated that insurgency has no foothold in Oklahoma. One of the first things that met Mr. Sherman's eye here was a large banner with the words, "Sunny Jim for President in 1912." Sherman's speech was a eulogy of the Taft administration, an able defense of the Payne tariff bill, and contained many personal statements highly complimentary to the president. The fact that the vice president's name had been mentioned by United States Senator Gore in connection with the so-called McMurray Indian contracts gave the coming of Mr. Sherman to Oklahoma more than the usual interest, but he did not refer to the matter in his speech. When asked if he would refer to the Gore incident, he said, "No, I would not dignify him by mentioning his name."

RACES MAY BE MARRED BY RAIN

Planned to Carry Out Program at Fair This Afternoon if Sun
Smiles on Track.

WHICH IS IN BAD CONDITION

Harrie Jones Scheduled to Drive Alcyfras, 2:04½, to Beat Track Record.

If the weather man smiles on the fair association, that is with a few rays of the hot sun, the races will take place this afternoon as scheduled. As a result of the heavy rain last night and the continual mist all morning, the track at the fair ground is in a terrible condition. William King, secretary of the association, said about eleven o'clock, that if the sun came out warm by noon, that it might be possible to run the races off according to the program. The track is in such a condition now that going is almost impossible. In case the races are not held this afternoon a double program will be held tomorrow, when both today's and tomorrow's races will be held.

Today offers the best day's program of the week and the fair board regrets very much that it should be spoiled by the rain. Harrie Jones, the local reisman, planned to drive Aleyfras, 2:04½, to beat the local track record. The sensational roan pacing mare now holds the world's record for mares and was expected to go a good mile this afternoon, although it is now doubtful whether she can lower the track record on account of the muddy condition.
She trailed the track last Tuesday in 2:10½, going the final quarter in 30¼, a 2:01 gait. Among other numbers on the race program today were the 2:16 pace and the 2:17 trot which are considered the best events of the fair. The gentleman's road pace is expected to offer some rare sport. The three-year-old pace, which was set for this afternoon,
was raced yesterday. Miss Mae Simpson was scheduled to drive her own horse, Black Lad, in the 2:16 pace today.

The first day's races yesterday were interesting and enjoyed by a large crowd. One local horse finished in the money. Clyde Nebra winning second money in the 2:30 pace with Martin Kelly. Doratha, driven by Clell Maple, was the only other local horse entered and she took fourth in the 2:30 trot.

GAME WARDENS BEING DISMISSED

George W. Miles Has New System
With Which he is Experimenting

WORK ON A STRAIGHT SALARY

Deputy game warden employed by the State fish and game commissioner, have been given to understand in a course of instructions just completed by George W. Miles, State fish and game commissioner, that the purpose of the Miles' administration which recently succeeded that of Z.
T. Sweeney, of Columbus, is first to provide the woods and fields of the State with plenty of song and game birds, the trees with squirrels, and second to see that the birds and animals are protected. And so with the fish in the lakes and streams. As the first step toward putting such a plan into execution, Commissioner Miles has discharged some 150 wardens employed by Sweeney on the commission plan, which meant that for every fine collected on an arrest made by such warden, the warden received $20.

Every warden employed now in the department is paid a straight salary and is allowed no commission. This will perhaps mean that that the operation of the department will cost a little more in the long run, but since the cost is paid without any draw on the state treasury, Commissioner Miles feels that no one will have any just grounds for complaint on this score.

WILL BUILD NEW BRIDGE AT ST. PAUL

Big Four is Now Making Ready to Replace Old Structure With Modern One.

ONE SPAN HAS ARRIVED

It was reported a few days ago that the Big Four would repair the big bridge near St. Paul. From latter developments it seems as if the Big Four is going one better and will replace the old structure with a new bridge. One span of the new bridge arrived at St. Paul Saturday evening and is on the company's switch. It consists of two steel girders of the eye-beam design, eighty-three feet long, 9 feet high, the top and bottom plates being about three-quarters of an inch thick and seventeen inches wide, the bottom one being reinforced from the center about one-third of the length each way toward the ends with an extra plate. On both sides of each girder is riveted twenty upright bars or ribs and each girder weighs 49,500 pounds, and they,
when placed in position, will be bound together with eleven ex-braces.

Workmen are now engaged in raising the two abutments and three piers with concrete to a height to conform with the new structure and bring it to the same level as the old. The massive affair was manufactured by the King Bridge Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, and three flat cars were used in conveying it to St. Paul.
